

Studying in a Globalized World: Trends in Higher Education Internationalization

Eva Egron-Polak
Secretary General
International Association of Universities

Vienna Lecture Series, April 20, 2012

Presentation Outline

- Context , Concepts and Definitions
- 3rd Global Survey on Internationalization – Global and Regional Perspectives
 - policy importance, internal and external drivers, goals, related mechanisms and priorities, obstacles, risks geographic priorities
- General and Regional Findings
- Re-thinking Internationalization
- IAU response to the Challenges

Context, Concepts and Definitions

- Political, economic, linguistic, cultural and HE context matters to internationalization
- Context is changing all the time, in every part of the world
- Context determines internationalization goals and the capacity to pursue them; opens/constrains choice of priorities, mechanisms, and partners (the race for international students, the drive to rise in the rankings)
- Globalization (economic, political and cultural interconnectedness) is key factor shaping HE internationalization
- End of simple dichotomies such as North – South; East – West; Near and Far; Resource Rich and Resource Poor nations

 Internationalization adopts many faces, not all welcome ³

Major Obstacles to Internationalization in 2005 and 2009

Ordinate ranking	2009 Internal Obstacle	2009 External Obstacles	2005
1	Insufficient financial resources	Limited public and / or private funding	Lack of faculty interest and involvement
2	Limited faculty interest and involvement	Difficulties of recognition and equivalences	Administrative inertia or bureaucratic difficulties
3	Limited experience and expertise of staff	Language barrier	Limited experience and expertise of staff

General and Regional Findings

- Internationalization is important for HEIs
 - largely driven from the top, and by government policy
 - funding and faculty/staff interest and capacity are key internal obstacles
 - lack funding a major external obstacle
- Strong focus on students' preparedness and mobility
 - yet mobility remains low, unbalanced and terrain is shifting
 - focus on curriculum relatively weak
 - Growth in Joint/Double degrees, offshore courses less so
- Regional differences in goals, rationales and perceptions of risks of internationalization are pronounced

© IAU April 2012

General and Regional Findings

- In developing countries, importance of research collaboration far greater
- Perceived risks of brain drain, cultural homogeneity and even neo-colonialism
- Importance of certain regions and lack of interest in others in internationalization policies and programs

Result: Re-examination and critical analysis of internationalization purposes is on the rise

Re-thinking of Internationalization

Initiative coordinated by IAU to, inter alia:

- Redress balance between academic and other motivations
- Avoid negative impact of growing link between prestige (competitiveness) and internationalization
- Re-focus on quality of education as primary rationale and key goal
- Promote inclusiveness and access (regionally, institutionally, disciplines and for individuals)
- Avoid a single model of ('world class') excellence

19

Re-thinking of Internationalization II

in order to:

- Ensure pursuit of multiple dimensions of internationalization = less focus on mobility and quantitative results
- Underline curriculum, qualitative changes in pedagogy and administration, impact on attitudes
- Balance pursuit of “global competitiveness” with search for “global competence”
- Recognize, respect and respond to the different and specific interests and needs of all partners, e.g. avoiding brain drain, encourage all languages

Responding to these Challenges

- ISAS, workshops and other services
- Affirming academic values as core of internationalization – a Call for Action in 2012
- Research (4th IAU Global Survey) in 2013
- 14th IAU General Conference 27-30.11.2012, Puerto Rico
Higher Education and the Global Agenda: Alternative Paths to the Future
1 sub-theme: Is globalization setting a new agenda for internationalization?
