

friday lectures

The friday lectures discuss strategies in higher education on how to prepare students at their "home-university" to meet the challenging demands of globalisation. What kinds of knowledge, skills and attitudes are needed to learn and work in a globalised knowledge society? What are possible social goals of university education in order to advocate global responsibility? Another important focus is on the analyses of the relationships between globalisation, higher education and the labour market from an intersectional gender perspective.
